The grand jury's balloting on Mr. Nixon was communicated to District Judge John Sirica and defense lawyers in a closed-door meeting early last month.

Kissinger Denies Pledge to Syria

From Wire Dispatches WASHINGTON. June 6 .--Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said today that the United States is not committed to giving Syria $100 million in economic aid for carrying out the ceasefire agreement with Israel.

He also said that the "chances are good" that a declaration of principles may be initialed by NATO foreign ministers when they mect June 18-19 in Ottawa.

On Syria, Mr. Kissinger said in a lengthy news conference that he had been misunderstood when he attempted to explain the American position concerning possible (inancial assistance to Syria. "Syria together with other countries can be eligible for support" from a $100-million fund requested in the 1975 fiscal foreign-aid bill, he said. Syria so far, he said, has not asked for any aid and the United States is not committed to providing such support. Soviet Mideast Role

On a related matter, he said that the Soviet Union has a role to play in future efforts to achieve permanent Middle East peace. At this time the United States has no intention to expel" the Soviet Union from the Middle East and indeed could not do so, he said.

He said statements made three years ago concerning his desire to oust Russia from the Middle East applied only to Soviet troops in Egypt. He said that because the Soviet Union, as a great power, has legitimate world interests, the United States has no desire to expel it from the Middle East. On other Mideast questions, Mr. Kissinger said:

• He has given no commitment to Israel on restraining Arab terrorism, apart from already known promises of political support for Israel in the event that it is forced to relatiate against terrorist raids.

• He has invited the new Israeli government leaders to visit the United States, but the date has been left to them. • The United States has had no contact with Palestinians, and Mr. Kissinger repeatedly refused to say whether the United States opposed or favored their presence at the Geneva peace talks. • The United States does not regard itself as a guarantor of the Middle East peace agreement and the only U.S. commitment to the nations of the region is to maintain its efforts for a just and permanent peace.

"We believe that the security of Israel, to which we remain committed, can best be assured in the context of a peace settlement in the Middle East," he said.

Mr. Kissinger said he would like to retire from shuttle diplomacy now that he has worked out disengagement agreements between Egypt and Israel and Syria and Israel.

He said that it is not a good idea for a secretary of state to be away from his desk so long and that the appropriate forum now is Geneva. However, he added This does not exclude that at some critical point I may not be prepared to help out."

On other points, Mr. Kissinger He stands by previous testimony before Congress that he had no prior knowledge of the "plumbers" operation in the White House and that he was unaware that a former assistant. David Young, was involved in that group's operations.

• There has been no progress in eliminating differences with the Soviet Union over a second phase of strategic arms limitations. But he did not rule out the possibility of progress being made when President Nixon visits Moscow later this month. • He does not believe India's underground explosion of a nuclear device has changed the balance of power in South Asia. At what should have been his triumphal first press conference after his marathon Middle East peace trip, Mr. Kissinger was questioned repeatedly about his alleged connection to the "pumbers" operation to plug security

Syria Says U.S. Friendship Is Necessary to Curb Israel

By James F. Clarity

In a major statement of its new policy toward Washington, Syria described the United States yesterday as a country that understands Syrian attitudes and whose friendship must be cultivated as a way of weakening Israel,

The statement, in a long article in the authoritative government newspaper Al Sawra, was the first extensive public explanation of policy that is apparently designed to accelerate the improvement of relations with the United States at the expense of Israel.

In the article, Syria said the U.S. attitude toward Damascus changed during the disengage-ment talks held here last month between Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and President Hafez al-Assad Syria said it had achieved "a great success" in changing the American attitude. The policy explanation was virtually a reversal in tone from the anti-American position expressed frequently by Damascus before the October war in denunciations of the United States as the friend and protector of Israel. The article appeared a day after it was announced here that President Nixon would visit Damascus

Other signs of improved Syrlan-American relations include the expectation by government officials that formal diplomatic relations, broken during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, will be resumed in several weeks, possibly sooner. Syria Sees Victory

In the article, Syria also said that it dictated its will in the disengagement negotiations. The

DAMASCUS, June 6 (NYT),- result, in the Syrian view, was that Damascus had achieved a political success. The article also declared that there were now signs of internal dissension in Israel that Syria would try to intensify.

For the first time since the beginning of our struggle with Zionism." the article said, "we are carrying on the struggle both militarily and politically ... Now most of the countries of the world understand us and respect us."

Under the heading "Attitude of the United States," the article said. "This is an aspect which we must take up very objectively, but we were able to achieve during the disengagement talks a great success with regard to changing the attitude of the United States, which had been standing against us as an absolute enemy. This attitude has changed and has become an attitude of understanding of our situation, to say the least."

"More than that," the article said, "it [the American attitude] is an implicit recognition that will soon take on another aspect, namely, that Israel has to withdraw from all occupied Arab territory. Every step in that direction serves our firm and basic line of struggle. We have to preserve friendship and we have to endeavor to weaken the friendship that Israel maintains with others in order to obtain the friendship of these others for us and for our cause."

The article said that "the enemy did not succeed either in its military or political objectives. We are the ones who have achieved the success ..."

Pakistan has sought guarantees from the United States and the United Nations Security Council of support in the event of a nuclear threat from India. There was no indication when Mr. Kissinger would visit India-but late July was considered a strong possibility.

Bhutan King Says He Will Try 30 In Alleged Plot

THIMPHU, Bhutan, June 6 (AP).—The teen-age king of Bhutan says he will try about 30 persons for involvement in an assessination plot against him and track down several ringleaders who escaped.

King Jigme Singhi Wangchuck, 18, told newsmen at a reception yesterday that the plotters want-ed to take over Bhutan and use it as a staging area for guerrilla raids into Chinese-ruled Tibet. Home Minister Tamii Jazyar said the plot involved a brother of the Dalai Lama, the former Tibetan ruler who now lives in India. Others implicated, he alleged, were a Tibetan concubine of King Wangehuck's late father. the Bhutenese commandant and numerous persons linked to previous political billings.

The conspiracy was discovered in March and about 30 persons were arrested. But the main leaders are still at large and presumed to be in India, officials

Veterans and Diplomats Pay Tribute to the D-Day Dead

STE-MERE-EGLISE, France, June 6 (AP).—The Allies of World War II today comments rated the 3th aniversary of D-Day, with religious services. military parades and ceremonies in Normandy towns and at the invasion beaches.

It was also an occasion for war veterans to reminisce. Veterans of the U.S. 82d and 101st Airborne Divisions, who parachuted into the night around Ste-Mere-Eglise on D-Day, sat at a dinner today and exchanged recollections of their experience. And three survivors of a U.S. Ranger battallon, which lost more than half its men storming a German strongpoint on a cliff
—at Pointe du Hoc—recreated their part in the battle, climbing the cliff with ropes as they did 30 years ago. They took part in a mock assault with members of a Ranger unit now stationed in West Berlin.

American Sector Today's ceremonies centered on the American sector of the invasion beachhead at the western edge of the landing zone. The British, Canadian and other Allied contingents that waded ashore to the east held com-memorations yesterday.

Ambassadors and generals from the Allied countries paid homage to the American dead in a wreath-laying ceremony at St-Laurent-sur-Mer, where a U.S. military cemetery is the last resting place of almost 10,000

The Allied invasion force in 1944 numbered 200,000 men and 5,000 ships.

Cornelius Ryan, who wrote "The Longest Day," estimates that total Allied casualties were 10,000 to 12,000 in the first 24 hours of the invasion.

The paratroopers of the 101st and 82d Airborne Divisions had the job of securing causeways through fields flooded by the Germans. Troops landing on the beaches were to spread inland along the causeways. Herman Stein, 53, who took part in the 1944 raid on Pointe du Hoc, recalled that the easiest thing was getting on top of the

This year's D-Day celebrations were the biggest ever held here, with 1,500 veterans and more than 350 officials attending.

Bradity at Ceremonies The U.S. delegation was led by five-star Gen, Omar Bradley, 81, who commanded the U.S. First Army on D-Day. Because of his advanced age, Gen. Bradley at-tended only two ceremonies here and spent most of his time rest-

Lawrence Hogan, R-Md., aid: "I haven't heard or seen anything in this whole presentation that would warrant indicting the President."

The determination of who is to be indicted and who is to be named an unindicted co-conspirator is the responsibility of a grand jury, usually acting with the advice of prosecutors. In a standard criminal case, an

"unindicted co-conspirator" refers to a person the grand jury believes took part in a conspiracy but does not want to indict for one of two reasons-either the prosecution wants to use him as a witness against others or there insufficient evidence to establish his guilt.

However, these reasons presumably did not apply to Mr. Nixon's case, in which the grand jurors apparently acted with more than normal caution.

In March, after the grand jury's secret report on Mr. Nixon was sent to the House committee, a high White House official said privately that, if the grand jurors had any evidence involving the President, they would have named him in their indictment.

It could not be learned what led the grand jury allegedly to conclude that Mr. Nixon was involved in the cover-up conspiracy.

Mr. Jaworski, in court papers filed yesterday, agreed to a defense request to provide the names of "all persons alleged to have conspired with the deiendants named in the indictment." He dld not say when he would do so, or whether this informstion would be under seal and

The jewels were being sold at auction in San Francisco, which is about as far away from Washington as the General Services Administration could get unless it wanted to hold the sale in Honolulu or Alaska.

The sale, on April 2 of this year, was the first of its kind that the GSA has ever conducted. It was an experiment by officials attempting to develop suitable procedures for disposal of surplus U.S. property which has been piling up as the result of the Forign Gifts and Decorations Act of 1966.

What Mr. Colson Said

testimony Charles W. Colson will provide for the Watergate prosecution and for the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment proceedings in the trials and hearings that lie ahead. These matters, however, must remain in the realm of such speculation. The same is not true of the implications of what Mr. Colson actually did say in pleading guilty to a felony in Judge Gerhard Gesell's courtroom on Monday. For the fact is that Mr. Colson did add considerably to our knowledge. He did so in several ways.

The first of these is more a corroboration of previous testimony (and suspicion) than an actual disclosure Last year. Mr. Nixon told us that the break-in to the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist committed by members of his plumbing staff proceeded from an excessively zealous desire on their part to fulfill an urgent national security mandate which he characterized as having been to acquire as much information as possible "about Mr. Ellsberg's associates and motives." Acquire is the key word here: Mr. Nixon implied that the purpose of this exercise—as distinct from the methods employed-was the wholly legitimate one of informing the government as to any potential further breaches of security (following the disclosure of the Pentagon papers) that Mr. Elisberg might commit. In pleading guilty to a felony in the same matter a few months ago, the President's former assistant and chief "plumber," Egil Krogh jr., however, asserted that at least part of the purpose of the mission had been to assemble a dossier for use "in discrediting Dr. Ellsberg as an anti-war spokesman."

Mr. Colson was a good deal more explicit. The crime to which he pled guilty was that of obstructing justice in his official capacity as an officer of the United States government by "devising and implementing a scheme to defame and destroy the public image of Daniel Ellsberg and those engaged in [his] legal defense." Addressing Judge Gesell's court, Mr. Colson went further, saying that "my motive-my purpose-in seek-

There is a lot of speculation about what ing to disseminate derogatory information about Dr. Elisberg and his lawyer was to neutralize Dr. Ellsberg as an anti-war spokesman in order to further the President's aims for ending the Vietnam war."

What Mr. Colson is telling us here is that the concept of national security and its protection which animated his activities was very much of a piece with that famous bit of marginalia that adorned the enemies list next to the name of another war critic and former Nixon aide, Morton Halperin: "A scandal would be most helpful here." Thus Mr. Colson has further discredited the easily invoked national security rationale and given us a clearer understanding of the smears that were committed in its nameat least as they were understood by their perpetrators. . The question that arises is whether Mr. Colson's former employer, the President of the United States, was aware of this particular activity.

It is by no means a trivial question. Mr. Colson has pleaded guilty to a crime committed in the White House-with the use of the President's authority and in some degree at his behest. And this is a felony quite distinct from those for which indictments of Mr. Nixon's former subordinates have already been handed down. The President has disassociated himself from any knowledge of the burglary of Dr. Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office. So, interestingly, has Mr. Colson. But the crime to which Mr. Colson has pled guilty does not involve participation in or even foreknowledge of the resort to a breakin to obtain information about Dr. Elisberg. It merely involves a campaign to use governmental powers to acquire and disseminate derogatory information about a defendant in a criminal case being tried by the same government that was working the dark alleys on the side. Was Mr. Nixon as innocent of any knowledge of these criminal aspects of the endeavor as he says he was of the burglary itself? This question should become an urgent concern of the House Judiciary

Washington's Greek Problem

Greece presents the extraordinary spectacle of a government whose worth and staying power are questioned, at least privately, by virtually all of its allies. This is the result of the flailing performance of Brig. Gen. Dimitrios Icannides, chief of the military police. He ousted the former military dictator George Papadopoulos last fall and installed a junta of his own. But where the Papadopoulos regime conveyed—while it Ity, the rule of Gen. loannides gives off a contrary impression of weakness and impermanence. The Greek economy nourishes the highest inflation rate in Europe. Practically no figure of prominence has joined the new regime. Purges and disaffection have weakened the armed forces. Just about the only area of "achievement" lies in repression. The regime has reopened the prison camp on the island of Yaros.

If Greece were not Greece, all this might be of no great consequence to Americans. But Greece is a traditional friend and a NATO ally and, in some measure, an American dependency. The United States has sentimental, moral, political and strategic reasons to be concerned about the continued despoliation of Greek public life by a small clique of military men and police officers. During the six Papadopoulos years it was feasible-if, finally, fruitless-for the United States to expect that the regime would move slowly back toward representative government. Gen. Ioannides, however, has not even gone through the motions of pledging to restore democracy. The sterility and narrowness of his leadership make it unrealistic for the United States to keep on believing that time will meliow his rule. This removes, in our view, an important reason for deferring to the junta, as Washington did in earlier years. Now, if not formerly, American deference is likely only to be explored by the dictators in Athens to solidily their own power.

The new junta's not so subtle threat is, if the United States cocls, to quit NATO and thereby to dump upon Washington a whole lasted—a certain impression of harsh stabil— range of geopolitical troubles. Some Greeks in the junta seem to think they could adopt a kind of neutralism on the model of Libya's dictator Qadhafi; others do not appear to have thought out their country's choices. The junta has declined to let an American aircraft carrier join the six destroyers already "homeported" at Athens, until a substantial amount of new military hardware is forthcoming. Some American military men, eager to use Greek military facilities, are prepared to swallow this treatment in the name of Mediterranean strategic requirements. It becomes increasingly a question, however, whether grand strategy compels the United States to follow a policy which many democratically minded Greeks identify with an uncritical embrace of the junta, Grand strategy in the long term may well require the United States to insure its position with the Greek people by stepping back a pace from the current regime.

> At the very least it is time to stop the flow of high-level visitors and salutations and to start strongly asserting the American interests—the moral interests as well as the political interests - in Greece's return to enter the MIRV multiple warhead era, and the Pentagon's numerous development programs for new and more deadly strategic weapons, now under Senate debate, point up the danger involved in considering a calling off of President Nixon's summit meeting in Moscow with Leonid Brezhnev at the end of the month. Both sides are heading toward a nuclear war-fighting capability that may replace the stability of mutual terror with "shoot first" nuclear nervousness.

A second Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty '(SALT-2) evidently cannot be completed this month. But it may still be possible to reach partial agreements, at least in principle, that would open the way for limiting the MIRV build-up before it gets beyond control. Reinforcement of the 1972 Antiballistic Missile Treaty by freezing deployment at the present one site for each side.

The Soviet missile build-up, now about to instead of the two sites permitted by the treaty, would be another useful step > Agreements on European security appear unlikely in Moscow unless Secretary Kissinger can win West European consent at the mid-month NATO ministerial meeting in Ottawa. But a full discussion with Mescow on Mideast issues is increasingly necessary if the progress toward peace achieved so far is to be carried further. Mr. Mixon's tour of the Mideast, starting Monday, should strengthen the authority with which he will be able to speak in Moscow.

The third Nixon-Brezhnev summit will not bring the millennium. It undoubtedly will produce more declaratory than substantive policy changes. But against the limited progress that is now forecast must be measured the dangers of halting progress entirely by putting detents on ice until Watergate is resolved. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Peace With Honor in Vietnam-2

By Anthony Lewis

BOSTON-Whatever their views on Vietnam. most Americans would agree that the way we got into that war was a disaster. We were taken by deception—by leaders who falsely assured us that we were only responding to a Vietnamese request, that our troops had a limited role, that victory was around the corner,

We have paid a terrible price for that deception, in politics and economics and belief in our ideals. Surely we ought to know that. Yet we are in danger of allowing ourselves to be deceived about the end of our war in Vietna 1 as we were about the beginning.

The first detailed account of the steps leading to the Vietnam truce agreement is given by Tad Szulc in the current Foreign Policy magazine. When one reflects on the story, what is striking is those familiar official attitudes: deceit, secrecy, contempt for pub-

Brutal Measures

President Nixon had repeatedly told us. for example, that he forced North Vietnam to accept the agreement by bombing Hanol over Christmas, 1972. But Hanoi had long ago agreed to the terms; it urgently wanted to sign in October what we finally signed the following January. The recalcitrant party was South Vietnam. and the Szulc piece shows that the bombing was designed to demonstrate our willingness to use

Why does the President persist in so transparent a misrepresentation of the Christmas bombing? Because the bombing had another purpose as well: to impress rightwing opinion in this country with our "toughness"-to foster the illusion that we smashed our way out of Vietnam with a kind of victory, called "honor,"

In this fantasy. American firmness successfully answered aggression. We ended our role in Vietnam with a strong government in Saigon able to maintain its own security, and with peace secured.

The reality is different. When we began our full-scale military action in Vietnam, in 1965, there were about 3,000 North Vietnamese troops in the South: in the truce we implicitly accepted the presence of 130,000 to 140,000. So much for "victory." The Saigon zovernment would not last a day without the United States. The U.S. role has not ended: 'The President wants to spend more than half of all American aid for the next year, economic and military, in Indochina and of course there is no peace for the Vietnamese.

Face Saring

The officially maintained filusion of toughness, victory and honor is a piece of Caucasian face-saving. It fits perfectly with Renry Kissinger's fear of a rightwing reaction in America if our withdrawal from Vietnam were seen as a defeat. It fits with Nixon's stated view of Americans as "children"—who cannot be told the truth. When the Szuic article appeared, the State Department handled it with the same attitude of contempt for public intelligence.

Asked about its mention of secret commitments to Hanoi, an offirial spokesman said there were none. Later, he was shown a secret State Department document saving that the United States had "assured" Hanol that it ≠ould remove all U.S. civilian employees of the Saigon Army within a year as we have not done. The spokesman then said that he had not been "asked about American civilians, but only about secret commitments." The word "assurance," he exrizined did not mean "commit-

Almost Nothing

Congress has to a great extent been an accomplice in the policy disingenuousness about the end of the war. Sen. Pulbright could give a wonderful worldweary speech about the United States in Vietnam, but he did almost nothing; he and his Foreign Relations Committee colleagues have seldom even asked afraid that he, like so many of Kissmeer hard questions. Nor has our political leaders, firmly be-the press been exactly a tiger in getting at the truth of what we did and what we promised before the truce agreement.

In short, we are getting more of what took us into Vietnam: the surreptitious manipulation of power, the selling of illusions, the avoidance of hard truths. Do we really want to pay the corrupt-ing price for all that again? Or are we ready to face realities now-ready to believe that, with all its inconveniences, democracy suits us better than government by secrecy and deceit?

Americans would prefer the truth, however unpleasant. People are showing increasing disquiet with the official fantasies. The Chicago Tribune, which along with The Washington Post published the text of the Szulc article in substantial part, wrote recently that it had supported Nixon in Vietnam but was concerned now about the word "honor." After the "fearful price" paid from 1969 to 1973, it said, "the killing goes . . . and we can wonder, as the French must have wondered

There are reasons to think that after Dien Bien Phu, how high the price for that honor, and how legitimate it was."

It is not healthy for any people to fool themselves about what they have done-not Frenchmen, not Germans, not Americans. Our society will continue to suffer from the effects of Vietnam until we tell ourselves the truth: that we made a mistake, that our intervention was destructive, that there can be no peace and no honor until we abandon the illusion of a civilizing mission in

Kissinger's Latin Diplomacy

By Stephen S. Rosenfeld

WASHINGTON. — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has been heard to muse about Latin America along these lines:

The public perception of Europe sees a strong Atlantic alliance and great unity, where in fact the alliance is not strong and unity is slight. Meanwhile, the public perception of Latin America is of conflict and great diviness, where in fact there is a solid underlying community of interest. They need us, Kissinger said of the Latins, and we need

Two coniderations seem to have produced Kissinger's sudden but calculated appreciation of Latin America, a region which has long felt under-appreciated by a succession of American administra-

On the conceptual level: Latin America may not loom large in the world balance of power as measured in conventional military-political terms but it does loom large in terms of world resources, a dimension given new prominence by the energy crisis and its aftermath. It is also a major market for American exports, an important factor as the requirement grows for earnings with which to pay for oil.

On the practical level, Kissinger has apparently found in his few bu; intense personal sessions with Latins that they are more reasonable to deal with than he had

The upshot is a new policy, one eschewing the social evangelism and anti-Communist thrust of the Alliance for Progress and, instead, focusing on removing ideological burrs, smoothing out political bumps and ensuring the orderly running of hemispheric economic affairs. You might call the policy Alliance for Business.

Cuba Blurred

Cuba has been considerably Americas, leaving a curious situation: a lot of Americans find their government's Cuba policy anomalous but Latins mostly pass American policy by. Allende's fall and death in Chile fortuitously terminsted the only other local country situation which put the United States and some Latins into major ideological or political collision.

The Soviet Union, having bet on a socialist Chile and lost, seems now to be placing a new bet on Argentina, which has its own reasons at home to lean left abroad. But nobody in Washington seems to have worked up a reduced by Kissinger include the Panama Canal, an expropriation dispute in Peru, fisheries off the Latin West Coast, and so on. Not all of these are solved. Regarding the canal, for instance, Strom Thurmond constitutes a powerful obstacle in the Senate. Kissinger counts, however, on a showing of activity and concern, at least by the executive branch.

In economic affairs, the Kissinger style is to set up working groups in which knotty perennial issues like multinational corporations and investment disputes can be diverted from the political arena to the less volatile ways of the bureaucracy.

In a rare personal intervention, he received the Jamaican Drime minister in March, hoping to promote a negotiated agreement on revenue between Kingston and the American bauxite companies. The effort failed but there has so far been almost no harmful political fallout from what could have been a poisonous dispute of TTT dimensions.

Competition?

Kissinger's predecessors worked for years to induce West Europe and Japan to invest in the Inter-American Development Bank. With the new economic conditions, however, Kissinger said in effect: why help bring competitors into a good American market? So West Europe and Japan are not joining the bank.

There is in Kissinger's Latin approach a casual and pragmatic or opportunistic aspect which disturbs some old Latin hands. They worry that the secretary's facile use of diplomacy to improve the hemisphere's business climate pays too little heed to the real political rapids still to be run in Latin America and to Latin na-tionalism and the potential for anti-Americanism.
Others fear that Kissinger is riding for a bad fall if the Congress does not take the major steps on trade and aid on which the deeper success of his policy rests. Tariff preferences for Latin exports, for instance, lie on the Other side of the administration's trade bill, which is stalled on the Hill. The Congress is siting on new development money, too.

There is also a human rights lobby, which deplores that some of the governments with which the United States is strengthening its ties are harsh and repres-sive and some aim more at eco-nomic growth than social justice. Rissinger, however, is moving shead. His policy has a rationale resources—and a momentum.

WASHINGTON, June $ (IHT). -The House yesterday voted down a new federal sugar program, apparently killing the 40year-old Sugar Act and freeing the market from government subsidies, import quotas and complicated pricing formulas.

Liberals and conservatives, prodded by consumer groups and big industrial users of sugar, joined to let the program lapse in July, 1975. The bill was defeated, 209 to 175. Leading House proponents of the bill said they would not try to resurrect it.

The program, which opponents had said would cost consumers more than $500 million annually. was killed at a time when the market price of sugar was at its highest level in 50 years.

Wiped out in addition to the government's "price objective" formulas were the quotas under which about 30 countries imported sugar. Also eliminated was about $30 million in government payments to farmers.

Rep. W.R. Poage, a Texas Democrat who is chairman of the Agriculture Committee, called the defeat "most unfortunate" and warned that consumers could expect "still higher prices."
But there was widespread evidence of impatience with continued government control at a time when sugar prices are soaring. A typical dissent in the seven-hour debate came from Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich.

Natan Schpeter, a 53-year-old Bulgarian economist who served with the UN for six years and with its affiliated Industrial Congress may eventually come to the conclusion that subsidizing a horde of lobbyists and subsidizing foreign governments is unwise." Rep. Dingell declared before the vote.

The outlook for the sugar program was not altogether clear. A similar proposal is pending in the Senate, where it is under the jurisdiction of the Finance Com-

The unit's chairman, Sen. Russel Long, D-La., is from a major sugar-producing state and can be expected to make an effort to revive the program.

Special Groups Some special interest groups, such as organized labor, sought merely to make various provisions of the law more to their liking. But others thought high prices made the program obsolete. The proposed five-year extension of the law would have increased the government's "price objective" by a half-cent a pound. While the move was expected to have no immediate effect on the market price, already far above the "objective," the increase caused concern among consumer groups. The defeated legislation would have continued, at a reduced level, payments to farmers for raising sugar. The new program would have stopped government subsidies for any single producer at $9.400 a year, beginning July J.

Amin Assails 'Propaganda,' Threatens to Expel All Britons

KAMPALA, Uganda, June 6 UPI: President Idi Amin today breatened to expel all British ltizens from Uganda in retaliaion for a report accusing him of istituting a reign of terror.

The report issued earlier this tek by the International Comlission of Jurists, accused the Iganda government of responsiility for the deaths or disapearance of tens of thousands of Igandans.

Although the group is based in witzerland, Gen, Amin accused he British government of inspirng the reports and the BBC of preading false propaganda about kanda.

The President threatened to lese the British High Commision and "give all British nationls two days to leave if the Irlish government and the BBC resist in publishing unfounded propaganda about Uganda." An stimated 1,000 Britons live in

Situation Discussed

The acting Billish high comnissioner today met the Ugandan oreign minister. Elizabeth Sagaya, to discuss the situation. Radio Uganda said Gen. Amin vould announce retaliatory measires against Britain tomorrow.

The President said: "Not a single political prisoner [is] under detention in Uganda The radio station said later that British representatives would tour Luzira Prison at Gen. Amin's invitation before he announces his plans for retaliation.

Gen. Amin said he recently ordered an inquiry into the disappearance of thousands of Ugandans since he came to power in an army coup in 1971.

Faise Propaganda

He said Britain was publishing false information because of his so-called economic war, which led to the expulsion of an estimated 40,000 Asians, most of whom held British passporta.

The International Commission of Jurists, which has consultative status to the United Nations, sent its report to UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim with a request that the allegations be taken up by the UN Commission on Human Rights.

The report, based on statements from Asians, Africans and others who fled Uganda, said the armed forces had used their powers "to arrest, detain, torture and kill thousands of civilians from all walks of hie."

U.S. Control On Oil Deals Gets Backing

Energy Chief Endorses Curbs on Companies

By Morton Mintz

WASHINGTON, June 8 (WP). -Federal Energy Administrator John Sawhill yesterday endorsed a proposal that government approval be required for interna-tional oil companies price agree-ments with producer countries.

There was uncertainty about how others in the administration viewed the legislation, to be introduced by Sen. Frank Church. D. Idaho.

Sen. Church, emphasizing that major oil companies' profits and producing countries' prices have increased "in tandem," told a hearing of his Senate Subcommittee on Multinational Corporations that the companies lack in-centive—as well as leverage—to hold down prices for Middle East

Mr. Sawhill said that his agency has begun "an intensive and farreaching study" of how the government can acquire "an effective voice on the terms by which oil is imported."

Important Consequences

"Very important consequences" for prices may flow from negotiations in Geneva between Saudi Arabia and the owners of the Arabian American Oil Co. on the share of ownership in Aramco that Saudi Arabia is to acquire, Sen. Church said.

But, the subcommittee counsel. Jerome Levinson, said, none of the companies had consulted with the government before undertaking the negotiations. He said that in exchange for an assured supply of crude, the companies may be willing to accept higher prices that would aggravate what Sen. Church termed "an enormous inflationary thrust."

Sen: Church directed the subcommittee staff to draft a bill requiring oil companies to provide the Federal Energy Administration with "timely information" on any negotiations with producer

The FEA would be empowered to join with the companies in formulating acceptable price ranges, and company-country agreements would require government approval.

The drafting is expected to be completed by next week. Mr. Sawhill promised Sen. Church "to work closely with you."

PARIS THEATER-2 Beckett Revivals In English, French

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss DARIS, June 6 (IHT).-Beckett enthusiasts should be over-joyed. At the Théatre Oblique— La Resserre, three flights up in the main building of La Cité Universitaire (21 Boulevard Jourdan)-there is a bilingual evening of two of the Nobel Prize-winner's plays: "Krapp's Last Tape" (in English) and "Comédie" (in French). Henry Pillsbury, an American actor-director, has staged them reverently in the glum, sardonic manner of the master.

"Krapp's Last Tape," first seen here in French some seasons ago. is up for revival by Jean-Louis Barrault and so Mr. Pilisbury plays it in English. He puts the production under a circus tent and gives Krapp a red-tipped nose and fuzzy hairdo. But the lighting is somber and the scene

Krapp, you may remember, is a brooding, lonely elder, looking back dolefully on his past. At 39 he recorded his views and autobiography on tape and now, at 69, he listens to his younger voice with many a wry comment. His kidneys are giving out, which requires sorties to the toilet. A neglected author. Krapp despises his former self and from his bitter autocritique arises a bieak evaluation on the dark lot of man. Despite the makeup, Pillsbury plays transparent jars by Dominique Lacarrière, Elisabeth Euppert and Marc Godard in French, apparently reveals the life an unhappy trio lately led, for the figures seem to be shades cncased in funeral urns. They repeat their laments at mounting tempo during the playlet's brief traffic. The two selections from Beckett are not related, except perhaps in their deadend philosophy, but Pillsbury has united them in a single setting, Krapp's study downstage fading out as the spotlights illuminate the large vases upstage which are inhabited by the characters of "Comedic."

niece of production and playwriting, seems to me to be a clear case of collusion against critical sagacity. That Roger Planchon, though his script judgment is often awry, considered this play a good one I seriously doubt. Instead I contend that he found it simply a scenario upon which he might deftly work his chicanery and fool the critics into believing it is something that it is not. He has succeeded. but the hollowness of the enterprise is apparent throughout.

Vinaver has sought to write a devostating satire on American commerce, American advertising methods and on v:hat some call American economic imperialism. He pictures a Franco-American struggle between two toilet-paper manufacturing firms and the eventual surrender of Gallic independence to the alimight; Yankee dollar. These caricatures of American business means drawn by allen hands are so grotssquely exaggerated that they miss their satirical aim. Americans make better and often more savage fun of themselves. One has only to compare such a heavy-handed and monotonous mish-mash as this one with such a Broadway show as "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" or "Beggar on Horseback" or with such a novel as Sinclair Lewis's "Babbitt" to distinguish the ridiculously false from the amusingly true.

Taking this strained and foolish text of Vinaver, filled with repulsive toilet jckes, Planchon has staged it as though it were a musical comedy. It has enough elaborate scenery to furnish several editions of George White's "Scandals," but it lacks the American know-how for manipulating it. On the opening night there was much creaking and cracking and the stogehands had to come out in view of the audience to adjust the lavish décor, which must cost the taxpayer a pretty penny.

Planchon probably never saw the great revues of Ziegfeld and Earl Carroll, but he has obviousstudied the Hollywood musicals and has galvanized the proceedings with dance, song and chorus numbers modeled after Busby Berkeley patterns, though we find again that French hoofers and erconers seem unable to master the American technique. It is disheartening to find such seasoned artists as Madeleine Ozeray, Marcel Dalio and Maurice Teynac participating in a rumble of this order. They must know better, but actors must eat,

Le Grand Magic Circus: "De Molse à Mao' (at the Théâtre d'Orsay) had a stormy premiere on Tuesday evening, with the house utterly out of control and curtain-time long delayed. A sadsack band of first nighters ignored the thrice-broadcast no-smoking injunction and perched themselves on the stage to block the view of one side of the auditorium. This caused angry protest, but no action was taken against the offenders. This submission to such behavior made some speculate as to whether or not another Barrault theater was being "oc-

"Thunderbolt and Lightfoot," a "lunny, tough-fibered crime com-edy with an unobtrusive edge of drama," pleased Howard Thompdrama," pleased Howard Thompson. "With Clint Eastwood as an older, wise thief and Jeff Bridges as his grinning apprentice, the picture is consistently entertaining and interesting," Thompson says. Written and directed by Michael Cimino, the pattern is the fertiliar "crimes till described." the familiar "crime still doesn't pay and the big climactic heist missires." but the script is freshly turned in characterization and plot, amusingly ribald and neatly placed."

"Chosen Survivors," a sciencefiction film, presents a view of a possible doom:day featuring bats. If the chills are intermittent, the combination of the voracious as unwitting pareners in disaster gives some novelty and a sardonic twist to the film." A.H. Weiler ars, "The 11 survivors here have been selected by computer to live in a seemingly safe, luxurious, gadget-filled environment miles below the earth's surface, presumably to save mankind after a wholly destructive thermometear war. The behavioral expert among them soon drives them up the valls by confessing that there is no nuclear holocaust and that the reactually guines pigs in a controlled experiment. Who survives is not important here, Sution Roley, a television director, maintains a fair level of suspense aided largely by scientific gim-mickry, technical effects and action sequences that accentuate the inmates' terror. Properly taut, if not memorable, performances are contributed by the principals. including Jackie Cooper, Lincoln Elipatrick, Earbara Babcock and Bradford Dillman."

"The Year of the Dragon," by Frank Chin, is the last in the American Place Theater's sub-

As in his earlier play "The Chicken-Coop Chinaman", Mr. Chin is questioning identity—"how Chinese or how American is the Chinese American," says Clive Barnes. The critic says that "The Year of the Dragon" is "interesting" but "it has a lot of gaps in it. It lacks energy at times. What I found absolutely fastinating was its insights into the Chinese com-munity." Russell Treyz directs the cast, which includes Randall Kim, Pat Suzuki and Conrad

One of the reasons that for-eign designers are interested in taking part in such fashion spectaculars is not because they expect to open new markets for their clothes but because they are always on the lookout for low-priced manufacturers. For example, Emmanuelle Khanh has her embroidery designed in Paris—but it is made in Romania, as are many of her clothes.

Another example: Jean Muir designs a special line for manufacture in India, using local fabrics. But it's a two-way street: The Western European designers often pick up ideas and local styles, putting them straight into their collections. Surplus Dips in April But Widens in Quarter

PRANKFURT, June 6 (AP-DJ). West Germany's basic payments surplus declined to a preliminary 2.172 billion deutsche marks in April from a revised surplus of 2.503 billion DM in March and a surplus of 2.531 billion DM in April 1973, the Bundesbank reported today.

The basic payments balance, widely seen as a key indicator for the country's payments situation, takes into account only the current accounts and long-term capital movements.

"My only complaint about the way it functions here is that the job rotation system doesn't work -at least not in my team. We have been talk-ing to other team members, for instance the preassembly people, about rotating within the team, but they have been unwilling. The move by the bank brought the rate it charges large corporate borrowers to 11 1/4 percent from 11 1/2 percent.

Some indication of whether the big banks, such as Bank of Amer-ica or First National City Bank, plan to join in the reduction will come tomorrow when Citibank sets its prime rate for the week beginning June 10.

Wall Street also was expected to give close attention to the weekly bank loan figures which were to be released after the market closed by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

A decline in the loan figures would probably suggest to investors that demand for money has peaked and that interest rates have crested.

some bearish comment in a published report, fell 1 1/8 to 20 8/8. Gold mining shares fell fairly sharply following a drop in the price of bullion overseas.

Another possible dampening influence for the golds was a report from informed sources in Luxembourg that Common Market ministers decided not to make formal proposals for revaluing the official gold price at next week's Washington conference on monetary reform.

Homestake Mining lost 3 1.4 to 77 1/8, Dome Mines 3 1/4 to 48 3.4, ASA 4 5/8 to 77 1/8, and Campbell Red Lake 3 1.2 to 35. Prices advanced in light trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex index rose 0.87 to 84.53.

For recycling to work, major nations look to three key mechanisms. One is the private financial market, mainly commercia! banking. Another is the network of short-term credit facilities serving central banks with "swap lines" of government-to-government credit.

Finally, there are plans to cstablish a special "oil facility" at the IMP. This facility would but row from nations with surpluses and lend to debtors, but it does not exist yet, and its role in recycling is expected to be minor this year and next.

So the commercial banks have had to bear the biggest burden of recycling. The internal bank study says that so far this your banks have announced nearly $15 billion in credit in Eurocurrencies. Because not all Eurocurrency lending is made public, the study says, the total actually may reach $20 billion. These figures do not include about $5 billion in lonns by U.S. banks to foreigners, main-ly in Japan. All this lending 15 sharply higher than it was a year

Warning on Risk Desoite the impressive amount of international lending transacted by commercial banks so far this year," the study warns. "it nevertheless must be recognized that there are limits to the amounts that can be channeled through private markets to individual countries. No private financial institution, and indeed no international lending organiza-tion, can assume limitless credit

In addition as borrowing countries increase their debt, their interest and repayment burden rises, too. This diminishes their borrowing ability and their creditworthiness.

One way out for the banks is to pull in their horns and pass up business. Some are doing just that by refusing abort-term Mideast deposits, sometimes by offering interest rates too low to attract them.

Partly at the prodding of U.S. banking regulators, some U.S. institutions are stiffening their credit standards. Bankers say that Italy, as one example, may run into more difficulty borrowing Enrodollars because it already has borrowed heavily to finance its payments deficits.

Bankers hope that Mideast investors themselves will provide some help by shedding their fear of expropriation of their foreign assets and their fear of devaluation of their foreign-currency holdings. Such fears have helped discourage them from long-term

Japan's Growth Rate Minus 5%

TOKYO, June 6 (Reuters).-Japan had a minus economic first quarter of this year for the first time since 1954, the Economic Plunning Agency annonnced today.

Japan's gross national product during the quarter showed a nominal growth of 2.4 percent over the preceding quarter, but the real growth rate was minus 5 percent owing to a sharp rise

The decline in real growth was mainly attributable to a decrease in personal consumption, particularly purchases of clothing, automobiles, and light electrical products, such as television sets.

He said sharp increases of raw material prices forced buyers into retaliatory measures that redounded against the exporters.

Miller Confident On TriStar Sales

BOSTON, June 6 (AP-DJ) .-

Textron Inc.'s chairman, William Miller, sald yesterday he is confident that Lockheed Aircraft Corp. can sell enough TriStar planes by Nov. 30 to allow the complex recapitalization of Lockheed to proceed as planned. He was vague about how the quota will be met, but he left a strong impression that the sales plan involves personal visits to airlines by top executives of Lockheed and Textron and perhaps some arm-twisting behind

Mr. Miller said that getting 45 more firm orders for the $20million, wide-bodied passenger plane "is an essential element of the plan" as far as he is con-cerned, indicating that Textron will not put up its $85-million share of the recapitalization package if the condition is not

Are diamonds really the most secure investment?

No doubt about it-providing, of course, that they conform to certain basic criteria:

- The stones delivered must have a minimum caliber of one carat. - A formal certificate must cover the following key points:
 - Weight
 - Exact dimensions
 - Quality of the cutting Color
- Purity - An efficient service allows an investor to realize, with a minimum delay, the current value of his diamond or diamonds.

INTERNATIONAL REAL ESTATE

120 miles (74 kilometers) north of Los Angeles, California in the Carrizo Valley. 21,870 acres (8,854 hectares) all deeded (held in fee). State Highway 58, a major road, borders a considerable portion of the ranch. Ranch located about 20 miles (13 kilometers) west of Interstate 5, the principal freeway between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Access: Commercial air services to Los Angeles, and light aircraft or rental car to the ranch.

Land and Water: Terrain varies from flat to rolling land, with scenic canyon on ranch property. Watering is provided with a typical distribution of windmills, wells and springs.

improvements: Adequate perimeter and cross fencing plus employee housing.

cellaneous outbuildings for commercial cattle and grain operations. Present Use: 9,400 acres (3,806 hecgrain storage facilities, shops, and mis-tares) in non-irrigated farmland. 50% is in crops and 50% in summer fallow. The balance is fenced and watered for cattle. Ranch will qualify for reduced real estate taxes under the Agriculture Reserve Act.

Price: $3,608,550 or $165.00 an acre ($407.55 a hectare). It is believed there is no other land within 120 miles in any direction of Los Angeles, fenced and usable for agriculture, that can be purchased for under $200.00 an acre. Price is subject to change or ranch withdrawn from market without notice. Terms and financing available.

A VERY UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY IN FLORIDA, U.S.A.

. for a shrewd investor who seeks a solid investment, with unique apportunity for "short term" profits.

I am now settling a partnership situation, and will shortly establish residence in Europe. My magnificent tract of 430 acres of land must be sold. It has a large road frontage on a major U.S. Highway in a booming area of Florida which is well known to you.

The property adjoins an active community development owned by one of the 10 largest companies in the world. My property is zoned, platted, surveyed and ready for immediate development.

Our giant neighbor is building 4 self-contained villages. They are constructing lovely homes, and selling thousands of homesites. CIRCUMSTANCES BEYOND MY CONTROL DICTATE THE SALE OF THIS MAGNIFICENT PROP-ERTY WHICH IS HIGH, DRY AND LOVELY BEYOND DESCRIPTION ... AT A REAL BARGAIN PRICE, IN THE FASTEST-GROWING STATE IN AMERICA.

The initial payment is approximately: $232,000.

Total cost is: $800.000. YOU CAN ACQUIRE THIS LAND FOR LESS DOLLARS PER ACRE THAN YOUR S6 BILLION NEIGHBOR NOW RECEIVES FOR A SINGLE LOT... AND THERE ARE 3 LOTS TO THE ACRE!

Should you subdivide, your profits should average more than 4 TIMES your GROSS investment.

Serious buyer may contact me by writing or calling. I will telephone you and arrange a meeting at a mutually convenient location in Europe. Any deal we may conclude will be placed in Escrow, subject to property inspection. COMPLETE DISCRETION OBSERVED.

NAPOLEON SYMPHONY

By Anthony Burgess. Knopf. 366 pp. $7.95.

Reviewed by Mark Mirsky

In an age of dull prose, jargon long section is followed by of sociology and psychology, incessant buzz of gossip, the endless dribble of weepy-eyed ghotto hysterics, tin clatter of avantgarde mobiles, hollow academic puling: A reader who delights in succulent phrase, unctuous pap, the zest of word play and a saucy paragraph, must fall on each new work of Anthony Burgess with ravenous appetite. If some of his dishes have been mere dessert tarts, hasty puddings, gooseberry trifles such as "M/F", I can now rave that a full, groaning, gourmand's table has been set in his present opus, "Napoleon Symphony.

Sweeping though the panorama of the French emperor's life, rolling with a beat that makes us feel a Corsican teen-ager bounding in the general's creamy pants, half hoodlum, half genius, an adolescent whose energy animates an empire; it is of course Burgess, line by line, vibrating in Na-poleon's boots. But who is to say that this is not the truest form of biography, for the music, its dashing erratic, brilliant voice, compels us to believe we are in the presence of a Napoleon.

Burgess goes through the customary obeisance to the portrait of Tolstoy in "War and Peace," but how stiff and prissy an emperor the Russian's is next to Burgess's Napoleon who bubbles over with Italian gusto, setting the world aright, afire; a Titan, a Prometheus and even at the end, chained to his rock, tickled by the scooping eagles-marching armies to the tune of death agonies in his liver. How does Bonaparte/Burgess handle such a vast calendar of battle, civil reform, amour, intrigue? By jumping from critical moment to moment with a dazziing generalship of the raw materials of biography, showing that mastery which bends the rule of the fallacy of imitative form, just enough chaos, confusion, event tumbling upon event in the text for us to feel Napoleon's genius for the exact moment to push, shove, win through, echoed in the chronicler's talent for the precise cut, collage, surprise arrangement in ordering what seems like an endless roster. As interesting as Bonaparte's tactics are Burgess's literary dispositions, a strict chronological account, starting with a bridegroom late (only an author who understands rhythm can play this kind of joke on us); a book that is about a career rushing headlong, and we are standing about through its introduction with the directorate. old men, irritable, waiting for the action, impatient, entertained by

The jump rebid of four clubs simply showed a solid suit . . . and did not imply extra values. South chose not to open the bidding at the other table but the slam was still reached.

At both tables, the opening lead was the spade ace, ruffed by the declarer. Both South players now regretted that they had not reached a grand slam, since 13 tricks were available with normal breaks in the minor suits. However, they changed their minds when they played two high trumps and West discarded a beart. A spade was thrown from dummy, and then a heart on the third high trump. (At double-dummy, it would have been right to throw a dismood.) The moment of truth arrived when South then began to run diamonds. LONDON, June 6 (IHT) -Although this was Coronation Cup day at Eosom, the only sign of royalty was outside the curtained trailer of Gypsy Brittania Lee. The fortune teller, who will read your form sheet, says that she is "under the patronage of the queen of Afghanistan and other royal personages."

For Gypsy Lee, as for the jellied-eel vendors' and other sellers of wares, this day brought in less money, less glamour and 290,000 fewer persons than yesterday's 300,000, but the same kind of horseracing. Like the Epsom Derby, an unexciting classic with ordinary horses, the Coronation Cup was not a crowning achievement for of the participants.

The cop, first run in 1902, was a five-horse race of 1 1/2 miles for 3-year-olds and up. The race favorite at 6 to 4 was Dahlia, the Frenchtrained queen of English horseracing last year. but a failure this season. The filly was England's leading money-winner in 1973, gaining all her £79,330 ($190,152)—In one race, the King George and Queen Elizabeth Stakes. In her last race of the year, she romped home first in the Washington, D.C., International, She was on her way to being a super horse, and instead of sending her down to the farm for breeding, oilman Nelson Bunker Hunt, her owner, kept her in the races.

Nondescript Field

the race half over, jockey Joe Mercer brought his mount out to a 10-length lead and there was no catching him. Buoy, owned by Richard

Hollingsworth and trained by Dick Hern, had won three times last year but always was beaten

Tennyson's second made it a royally bad week for the French. Yesterday, French-trained Nonoalco, ridden by the Yves Saint-Martin, was a badly beaten favorite in the Derby, finishing seventh. The other French horse in the Derby, Northern Taste, was fifth. Climb of 158 Feet

After today's ride on Tennyson, Frenchman Saint-Martin said his horse couldn't handle the course, which has a climb of 150 feet over the first half mile and then a gradual descent around the turn. The first four furlongs of the stretch go slightly downhill, and then, to completely discourage the horse, the last half furlong has a sharp rise to the wire.

The horses, though, will be back for another two days of running. The Epsom meeting ends Saturday with the 1 1 4-mile Oaks. And just like the four-day meeting here began, it will close in royal style. The queen was here yesterday for the Derby because it was tradition. She'll be here Saturday because her horse, Escorial, is the second choice in England's leading race for 3-year-old fillies.

The Parson's New Baby

By Russell Baker

always the parson among

"Oh, oh," all the other nations would say when they saw India coming down the street. "Hide the guns under the table and get rid of the loaded dice. Here comes India." And India would stride right on in, and stand there, looking at all those miserable sinner nations with such contempt that it did your heart good to see them humbled. America especially. America mas always getting caught by India. It could never get all its guns under the table before India walked in an ; caught it. This was because America had so many guns that there was no way any country could have gotten them all tucked under the table in the time it took India to slip into town and start looking for sin.

Also, America had the atom bomb, which it wore strapped to its back like a monkey. It was very tricky getting the atom bomb unstrapped and under the table quickly, and America was usually still fumbling with the etraps when India strolled in.

"What childish stupidity!" India would say to America. "Gosh!" America would reply.

"Playing with your atom bomb again, I see," India would say. "Will you never grow up. America? What of humanity? What of spiritual values?"

It was no good for America to offer excuses or try to persuade India that it loved spiritual values so much it needed its bomb to blow up anybody who let down spiritual values, to wit. Russia. India would simply stare down America and order it to report to the United Nations for a sermon, which Russia could not help laughing about. This always brought Russia to India's atten-

"You be there for the sermon, too," India would say to Russia. "I'll be preaching on spiritual values, the evil of guns and loaded dice, and the childish folly around the world."

WASHINGTON-India was of wasting your vast wealth on bombs when people are starving

In the end, all the other nations would wind up on their knees feeling guilty, singing, "When the Roll Is Called up Yonder, I'll be There" and listening to India tell them how to mend their ways.

"If only India had the tinlest little dirt smudge on its turban," replied Russia, "It wouldn't make me feel so inferior. But as for spiritual improvement, bah!"

Then, of course, a few weeks ago everybody found out India had been working all along to get a bomb of its own. It was China who broke the news. Nobody believed it at first. Everybody thought China was indulging its weird sense of humor again, like the time it attacked Jonathan Livingston Seaguli on nonliterary grounds.

Before long, though, Saudi Arabia, which had been sitting at the big window reading the stock-market reports, came bounding in. "Oh, Oh!" Saudi Arabia said. "Hide the guns under the table and get rid of the loaded dice. Here comes India.

All the nations hurriedly put their plous faces, but India did not appear. America even got all its guns hidden, and India still did not appear, America was able to get its atom bomb unstrapped and storted away. and still India had not appeared. Finally the doors opened. Slowly, a bowed India staggered into the room. It looked ex-hausted. Strapped to its back like a monkey, it had a brandnew atom bomb.

India was too spent to lecture on humanity and spiritual values immediately, so Britain went to it and peered at the bomb, "What does it look like?" asked Poland. "It bears a remarkable resemblance to Sadie Thompson," said Britain. All the nations still feel depressed about the parson's yielding to lust like that. "The thing I'm going to miss most." America told Russia the other day, "is singing. When the Roll Is Called up Yonder, I'll be There, but I'll still believe in spiritual values no matter how low India sinks." "As for spiritual values," said Russia, "bah!"

The Several Careers of Dr. Alex Comfort

By Lisa Hammel

NEW YORK (NYT).—It is simply not true that there are eight or nine different Englishmen named Alex Comfort, one of whom wrote that redoubtable bestseller, "The Joy of Sex."

But what of the biologist? The poet? The novelist, essayist, humanist, lecturer, researcher, translator, aesthetician? All one.

Dr. Comfort made his first appearance in this country in 1945 as the author of a novel called "The Power House." He was then in his mid-20s. There he was, peering at a book review in The New York Times, long-nosed, be-spectacled, acutely sensitive and a bit lacking in Vitamin D. He moved the reviewer to pained rapture. "The author is a soul in travail," wrote the critic, adding—his typewriter keys trembling to a Promethean apotheosis—that the book "howls to Heaven, and you have to listen to its howling." These shores next saw Dr. Comfort later that year in the incarnation of a poet. "His voice echoes others," regretted the reviewer, while adding comfortingly, "Alex Comfort has potentialities. ..."

Another Novel

There was another novel in 1949, and the author was squelched as a "secondhand Arthur Koestler."

But by the 1950s, second-hand was rapidly becoming first-class. The Cambridge-educated classicist-turned-biological-researcher (at University College, London, was bursting out in all directions.

There was a somewhat iconoclastic book of essays viewing Christian morality as "temporary scaffolding," and—signs of things to come—a book called "Sexual Behavior in Society," which the reviewer described as "a handbook for his social worker students at London Hospital Medi-

These were followed by everything from "an exploration of social evolution" to a translation of medieval Indian writings on

But by 1971, Dr. Comfort's pre-eminence as a medical biologist had begun to overshadow his dizzying array of other achievements. He was regularly turning up in the science columns and had become, according to one writer, "the dean of British researchers in the field [of aging]," ("But mostly with mice," Dr. Comfort added recently.

And then in 1973, his "Joy of Sex" was published, to some demurring reviews and considerable popular acclaim. To date,

Dr. Alex Comfort ... writing "More Joy."

it has sold 850,000 copies in hardcover (Crown; $12.95) and 1,783,049 in soft cover Simon and Schuster; 34.95), and has held its place on the best-seller list for 73

Lives in California

On a recent morning, Dr. Comfort, 57 years old, was in New York, en route to a speaking engagement (on aging, not sex). He is now permanently in residence in California, as a senior fellow at the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions in Santa Barbara.

"My interest is human biology. Poetry, religion, sex, are really forms of human behavior. I am interested in the whole spectrum of the biology of man." Pressed to expand on the thought, he made clear he preferred talking about

"Anyone who writes a book is expected to express an opinion on everything from traffic lights to the legalization of marijuana," he said, taking a fitful puff on a small thin cigar, which rarely leaves his mouth. "And that's not quite fair." With some prodding, however, he finally let loose a cannonade of comments. But holding a conversation with Dr. Comfort is rather like racing after an express train that has pulled out of the station. What about marriage, monogamy, fidelity, the new morality, women's lib, sex The answers, as they tumbled out, were often couched in analogy and metaphor.

thing to do with hicycles.

Elderly people do not generally run out f sexual steam, he said, but (back to bicycles), some elderly may have the misfortune of not owning a two-wheeler; or they may have to pedal a bit more slowly than they once did, or possibly they never really learned to ride a bicycle properly in the first place.

Women's lib. Women's lib is not only here to stay, but it is also "the best thing that's happened to men in a hundred years-I think women have been made to carry a large burden of male neurosis as well as their own." On the other hand, women's lib is not all beer and skittles. "I think women may be a little over-optimistic in thinking that they have all the options they want," he noted, particularly in the child's earliest STEATS.

"Men," he said, "cannot suckle (I used to be a pediatrician and spent a lot of time persuading women that what they had was not there for decoration). Men are also upholstered differently." Each parent, he added, has something to con-tribute, but the father has "a different texture and style."

Sex Objects

Women will also continue to have some problems with "aggressiveness," which can be variously interpreted as "assertion, dominance or hostility," until such time as it ceases to terrify men, he said.

On the other hand, Dr. Comfort does not see anything wrong with women being whistled at by construction workers. "We are all sex objects in all our relations," he said. Whether it's disturbing or not "has to do with how happy you are with your-

But what about marriage? Is it on the way out? Or perhaps in? "Marriage is a legal institution," he said.

"What you're talking about is a primary relationship. Most people find it difficult to manage more than one primary relationship at a time. But that's what my next book is about." Then how about monogamy? Or maybe

"The promise of monogamy the insincerity of fidelity—how these things can-be rethought will be in the next book," he Whereas "The Joy of Sex" was a kind of "Larousse Gastronomique" for the bedroom (Dr. Comfort himself makes culinary analogies throughout this charmingly illustrated tome: the next book will deal with some of the more problematic areas of love and sex.

And the book will be called. "More Joy."
